You are gone never, away! Here the tabernaching chry-But the shatters too are last. And the door has saving its har; The cold hade fless quiet still As a snow drift on the hill.

Are you really gone away? You did lave me to the did dee. Are you gone? I kiss your eyes, But they flatter not to rise; Lone I which me in. Interney more new con-Long I whisper in your car You would speak If you were here,

You are gone, sweet splitt, where ? Are you meaning to the sig— All invisible to mag. Yet my weeping do yet see, And lean downward cleer and law, Watching wistful where I go ?

Do you feel heat of the sun— Chill of alght when day is done— Channy tomb of drifting snow? Hear the wild winds when they blow-Fluttering leaves and fielding rain -Rivers running through the plain t

Do you see the purple heath On the cliffs, and und-meath Azure seas and yellow sands, Poppled conflicts on the hands— Or is cartifits sight and count So much loose mist ceiling round?

When at airth upon my feel Seeking sleep, I find instead Some strange coldinass on the brow, Feel it coming—going now Is your presence in the place, And your breath upon my face !

This I know not, Jon I know,

You are with the ancedy, dear, And they tell you not to terr; Though surpassing ale rise blind Mortal eye and neural actual; And they touch you when to do In the Land with all things new.

I must try to follow on To the Heaven that you have won: I remember what you said, And the puth you lift me trend— Though I carries on some most. I shall think you see me here.

You are gone away, away! Pass the night and pass the day. We shall meet in that sweet place, Hand in hand, and free to face— With the re-ting there to rest, With the blesse! to be biest.

RECEPTION OF GEN. SHERIDAN. Gen. Sheridan arrived in this city from New York in the steamer Empire State at an early hour this morning, and reusined on board until the time appointed for his formal reception by the city authorities. Before the hour arrived, the military companies of the city, except the Aquidneck Rifles, were under arms, and at eight n'elock were drawn up on Washington Spanie with the right resting on Thames street. Brig. Gen. Tew was in command. The ancient Attillery was on the right, commanded by Col. J. Here Powel, the flight infantry, under command of Lieut. Col. W. S. Brownell, had the center, and the Burnside Guards, Capt. Backanan, the I-ft. The music was furnished by Brown and Reeve's American Brass Band, of Providence, and the dram corps. At eight of Gen. Sheridan stepped ashore from the steamer and was met by the Mayor and the City Council in a body. Mayor Parker addressed the General as follows: General :- At gives me great pleasure in having the honor in behalf of the city gov-ernment and the citizens of Newport to velcome val to any against town, and welcome you to our ancient town, and to conder to be its hospitalities, which I do most contains, and hope that your visit with as, may be as agreeable to you as it is pleasing to us. Newport, sir, has bind the honor of welcoming here a Washington, a Lafayette, a Perry, and now she has the honor of adding a Sheridan.

To this General Sheridan replied in a low tone in a few appropriate words, and was then introduced by the Mayor to the Aldermen and Councilmen present. A procession of carriages was immediately formed and proceeded up the wharf to Washington Square, passing in review the military, to the front of the State house, then counter marching and falling into the rear of fi military who proceeded, as an escort, down Thames street, up Franklin and Spring, Bull and Kay, and down Catherine, to the elegant residence of S. D. Bradford, Esq.

Owing to the carly hour and the limited notice given of the time and mode in which the welcome was to be given, only a small number of people were on the Square; and, as is customary in this community, scarcely a cheer was heard. This was not from lack of heartiness in the welcome, but it is unconstitutional in Newport tol go into hero-

Before the procession reached Mr. Bradford's residence, however, a large crowd had rollected, and a good deal of enthusiasm was magicist.

The Washington Star tells the following story: "A few evenings since, during the prevalence of a storm, as a journeyman and his apprentice boy were at work in a carpenter shop, at the navy yard, the lightning entered in at the win low, passed down a saw in the boy's hand, struck a plane which the journeyman was using, and passing down the bit set fire to the piece of humber the boy and man unharmed."
